No Fail Trust in Healthcare

Lt. Col. Jason O. Harris understands the crucial importance of trust among teams. For over 25 years, he flew thousands of flights as a U.S. Air Force and commercial airline pilot. Whether carrying cargo and personnel into enemy territory or travelers to Paris, every single flight has required absolute trust between him and his crew. It's a lesson that's been reinforced mission after mission, flight after flight: Trust your people like your life depends upon it.

But Lt. Col. Harris doesn't just understand the importance of trust. He knows how to build it through a culture of deep commitment, accountability and empowerment. As an Air Force Academy squadron commander and instructor, he discovered the principles behind the trust he experienced in the cockpit. As he implemented those principles in his squadron, he saw trust skyrocket, performance improve and engagement increase.

Today, Lt. Col. Harris shares these principles through presentations, training and video courses with organizations ready to empower their leaders and teams with No Fail Trust.

Innovating Health Care Access for the Unhoused

Katie Hren, Associate Director, Community Connect Program, Cedars-Sinai • Alina Moran, President, California Hospital Medical Center • Jessica Nunez, Social Services and Street Medicine Manager, MLK Community Healthcare • Dr. Medell Briggs-Malonson, Chief of Health Equity, Diversity and Inclusion, UCLA Health • Brett J. Feldman, Director of USC Street Medicine, Keck School of Medicine of USC

Moderator: Ken Craft, CEO, Hope the Mission

Join us for a dynamic panel discussion featuring speakers from HASC member hospitals and health systems. We'll explore creative strategies for enhancing health care access for unhoused patients, including street medicine, partnerships, recuperative care and more. Learn about unique care models that center health equity and patient outcomes. Gain insights from success stories that showcase impactful and transformative approaches to serving our unhoused community members.

The Value of Developing and Implementing Alternative Care Models

With health care moving outside the hospital walls more and more, leaders must be well versed in the challenges and potential of alternative care delivery models. These innovative approaches extend care beyond traditional settings to meet patient needs while addressing hospital constraints. This panel session will discuss how models such as community-based care, digital solutions and partnerships are improving health outcomes, cutting costs, enhancing patient experience and helping organizations better manage population health.

Population Health Management: Access, Outcomes and Financial Implications

As health care reimbursement continues moving from volume-based to value-based, it's crucial for organizations to coordinate equitable care and address social determinants of health to help ensure their financial and social wellness. Shifting the focus from disease treatment to prevention and wellness also requires changes in care management and delivery that will impact a range of touchpoints in our health care ecosystem. This panel session will cover several major areas affected: access to patient services, health outcomes, financial implications and patient engagement.

The Rebellious Recovery

Former professional motocross champion Aaron Baker is a recovering quadriplegic. He is also a husband and father, and an author, orator, adventure athlete, entrepreneur and ambassador for spinal cord injury. In 1999, Baker suffered a broken neck in a horrific motocross accident. Since the onset of his injury, his focus has been rebuilding, mindfully and intentionally, with clear purpose and a grateful heart. Baker credits more than two decades of recovery and his simple, yet full and peaceful, life today to consistent, long-term restorative movement and mindset. For more than 20 years, he has been sharing his story with audiences around the world. Baker empowers audiences to think and move through adversity — and the cycles of life — with mind, body, spirit and lifestyle choices, and to discover peace, power, joy and reverence for life.
