Workshop Overview

Join fellow health care professionals for an immersive learning experience that dives beyond the 101 of traditional workshops. In each session, we'll begin with a brief overview of human trafficking crimes and their health connections. You'll then learn about the specific health impacts of trafficking, along with tools for identifying and assessing patients who may be affected.

In addition, you'll delve into the provider's role in response and referrals. You'll have the chance to apply your knowledge with peers through exploring case studies, as well as brainstorming policies and procedures that might be implemented in your own setting.

Human Trafficking: A Social and Racial Justice Issue

Through a range of interactive learning methods, you'll gain deeper insight into the social and racial justice aspects of this issue. While human trafficking crimes ensnare people of all genders, cultures, races and backgrounds, they disproportionately affect people of color, LGBTQI youth and other marginalized groups.

During the training, you'll hear inclusive language and learn methods and processes that will empower you to understand and take into account survivors' well-being. You'll also gain skills in assessing people across different backgrounds, inclusive of all skin types and pigments.

“Should be mandatory training for ALL health care workers.”

— Loma Linda workshop attendee, Jan. 2024

Course Objectives

Following this program, you'll be able to:

- Recognize the red flags of human trafficking in a clinical or community setting.
- Know what to look for, what questions to ask and how to create a place of safety for trafficking victims and survivors.
- Understand how health care and community health professionals make decisions in human trafficking cases, and brainstorm ways to make decisions.
- Apply professional, ethical, sensitive and trauma-informed approaches when working with trafficked patients.
- Advocate for survivors by helping them get needed services and resources.

Who Should Attend?

This workshop is geared toward doctors, nurses, nurse practitioners, social workers, health care administrators (reception, patient check-in and check-out), community-based organizations and law enforcement officials.

We encourage our hospital members to share this opportunity with community partners such as law enforcement, clinics/neighborhood hospitals, university/academic partners, nonprofit organizations and anyone else who may benefit.

“The information is very valuable. I have a better understanding of how to assess an individual that may be a victim.”

— Pasadena workshop attendee, Jan. 2024

Faculty

Samantha L. Calvin, PhD(c), MHI, MBA

An anti-trafficking advocate and leader in Arizona and the United States, Samantha has used through education and training to debunk the myths around human trafficking. She is active in community-focused work and research to understand how the issue of human trafficking is evolving.

Over the past ten years with Arizona State University's (ASU) Edson College of Nursing and Innovation, Samantha developed the Edson Human Trafficking Awareness Program, which she currently oversees. This program focuses on helping health care providers and community members to become more aware of what human trafficking looks like, ask better questions when working with potential victims and survivors, and know what resources to provide. Currently, Samantha is expanding this work to include a program for K-12 educators.

She has also served as a consultant for the U.S. Department of Justice. Samantha regularly speaks at ground rounds, conferences and panels throughout Arizona.

Monique R. Guerrero, M.OL

As senior program manager for the Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation's Learning Enterprise, Monique works with faculty, instructional designers and external partners in creating non-credit education courses. Her leadership and program management insight has enabled her to support the ongoing success of Edson's clinical lactation program, the development and launch of the Human Trafficking in Health Care program, and other projects.

Monique has a passion for higher education learning and providing opportunities to lifelong learners seeking to better their understanding and achieve personal growth. She attended Arizona State University for undergraduate studies and obtained her master's degree in organizational leadership, with an emphasis in project management, through Northern Arizona University. She is currently pursuing her doctorate in leadership and innovation at ASU.

Tejal Patel, Esq., CPHRM

A licensed attorney and insurance broker with over 20 years of experience, Tejal specializes in crafting innovative solutions to complex health care risks and legal challenges in California, and advocating for those without voices, such as victims of human trafficking.

Over the past eight years, Tejal has served as associate risk management counsel for Cedars-Sinai Health System in Los Angeles. In this role, she has led the development and implementation of multidisciplinary human trafficking trainings for clinical providers and hospital support staff. She continues overseeing the trainings and customizes each to include focused discussion about who traffickers target and how, red flags often displayed by those being trafficked, and appropriate trauma-informed care response by providers.

Beyond her health care role, Tejal advocates for anti-trafficking initiatives through grassroots efforts and partnerships with pioneering organizations such as iEmpathize. She believes in the transformative power of education and the vital role of health care providers in addressing human trafficking.

In support of improving patient care, Arizona State University is jointly accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE), and the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC) to provide continuing education for the healthcare team.
